"I first became acquainted with Capital City Village about three years ago when a good friend experienced serious medical issues. Those issues led to her being admitted to a skilled nursing facility where she quickly became a full-time resident. At the time, she was an active CCV member and, because I live in the DFW Metroplex, I was most fortunate to be able to rely on CCV volunteers for service referrals of various kinds, numerous and regular medical appointments and, possibly most importantly, advice, suggestions, and understanding. Volunteers have also regularly visited her in the nursing home since she was first admitted. The care, compassion, and helpfulness shown by everyone at CCV who has helped my friend (and me!) these past three years are beyond match...I have told CCV volunteers and others that, without their help these past years, this process would have been impossible for me. I am blessed to be associated with Capital City Village."

"I have had a lifetime of leadership and activities in professional organizations, nonprofits including church leadership, and quasi-governmental boards and commissions. Finding Capital City Village is the culmination of all my previous experiences rolled into one. Who knew that at my advanced age, I would still be able to contribute to the welfare of my community? Capital City Village whose mission is keep older people in in their homes is just the organization for those of us who, with a little help, can lead independent lives in our own surroundings and be productive citizens. Volunteers are a key to help with small chores and transportation if needed. But other important opportunities are making new social friends, enjoying special interest groups like book clubs, yes, even dominoes, movie groups, luncheons with interesting speakers, touring interesting places in the community, programs with information on keeping healthy all of which makes getting older a lark! Hats off to those founders of Capital City Village who had the vision to organize this great organization!"

"We joined CCV last year when my husband was diagnosed with bone cancer and are so glad we did. Tommi and Mart came to our house recently when I asked for a social worker. They gave us great advice on things we could do to be able to stay in our house and for my husband to be OK when I'm not there. like everyone we have met in the organization and have found the volunteers to be extremely Michele and Dan, Members since 2019 helpful."

"Volunteers? Who needs volunteers? I DO! How would I get to the many doctors' appointments I have in a given month? I wouldn't without CCV volunteers. How could I attend CCV functions, like committee meetings? Without CCV volunteers, I wouldn't, Sometimes I wonder why they do it? Is it the scintillating conversation members have each time they ride with one of our volunteers? Perhaps. I know what I get from organizing the files for CCV - a sense of joy, accomplishment and contribution. I'm always tired when I finish my organizing, but I feel so satisfied. Why? It's the people I get to see when I go to work. The laughter is wonderful and the conversation stimulating. I feel like I'm with good friends. So why is it that people volunteer for CCV? I'm not sure, but I sure hope they keep doing it. Maybe the answer can be summed up in the words of John Donne: "No man is an island, entire of itself; every man is a piece of the continent, a part of the main." There's no other way to say it: CCV volunteers are my heroes."

"I joined CCV shortly after my husband died and benefited from a widow support group. Gradually, I participated in some of the many social activities, meeting new friends as well as ones I have known from other places. The monthly domino gathering in a couple's home gives me laughter and hopefully keeps my brain active! I usually go to the monthly movie group since it is more fun than sitting by yourself. When I sold my home to move to a duplex with no yard maintenance, volunteers starting showing up or calling to help me pack, moved all my many heavy potted plants, hung pictures, shades, etc. that I couldn't reach without a ladder. A variety of activities are offered every month, many that have programs on health and other ways to continue to stay involved and active while remaining independent in my own residence. Car pools are available if needed and for those who don't drive, volunteers will take members not only to doctor appointments, but just to go shopping or to the beauty shop."

"Our volunteers drive members to and \ from necessary appointments and to our many social gatherings. We celebrate ourselves with a monthly happy hour, a coffee gathering, and with frequent social gatherings and special interest groups. Our members join together for cards or dominoes, book clubs, and mindfulness study."

"I love the wonderful volunteers!" Dorian, Member since 2020

"So far I have been fortunate enough to need very little help from this fine organization, but i am grateful to be a member and to know that when I need more help volunteers will be here for me."

"^I have been arranging a monthly CCV men's luncheon since early in 2012. We have called on members, volunteers and outside resources to present a huge variety of interesting slide show presentations. Working with CCV members for over seven years has been a rich and rewarding experience. I've made many friends and learned much from this varied and vibrant group." Henry, Volunteer since 2012

"The Village has helped me so much. I recently broke both my arms and they provided me with rides and even an electronic recliner. But even more, opportunities to make new friends have the social activities and the

been so generous."

"I've been so grateful for my connection to CCV both as a member and a volunteer. Recently I had a need to get help mounting an owl box on a tree in my backyard. I had no idea of how I would get it up there (12-15 high with an L shaped branch). A volunteer reached out to tell me that he was excited by this project. So on a recent Sunday afternoon, John came over, climbed backwards up my tall ladder and found the perfect spot. I'm now checking for nesting screech owls since that owl box has stayed secure through the past two rainy nights with strong winds."
